THE SCHOOLS

Some High School Expenditures—Petitions Out for Change of Districts—Trustees Call Meeting for Tuesday Night

The Glendale city trustees have called a public meeting for next Tuesday evening at the city hall for the purpose of being reinstructed in regard to the location of a school house in the neighborhood of the northern city limits.

There are petitions out for the annexation of West Glendale district to Glendale city school district. This not only means the annexation of that portion of the West Glendale district which came into Glendale by recent vote, but all other portions of the district west and north. It is understood also that there is a petition out in the Casa Verdugo section for annexation for school purposes of that portion of the West Glendale district to the La Crescenta district, this being a round-about way to acquire an independent school district north of the wash.

The tax rate of 1.35 for special school purposes in Glendale city district this year naturally arouses interest in the mind of the taxpayer as to what the money is spent for. As previously announced, the NEWS gives from time to time information under this head and will do so through the year. This time it is merely a glance at the expenditure of the Union high school for which a special tax of $30,000 is called for this year. This sum is spread over the six or seven grammar school districts, something over one-half being borne by Glendale City. The salaries of teachers and janitors constitutes the principal item of expense, but the "contingent" expenses last year amounted to over $10,000 and will probably not be less during the year beginning last July. Here are a few items taken at random from the list of bills approved up to a recent date:

Cunningham Curtis and Welch	$124.54
Drug and laboratory supplies	20.30
Coal	14.00
Commercial Printing House	18.00
Interest on bonds	24.52
Sundry items for labor	404.00
Litchfield Lumber Co.	279.27
A. C. Anderssen, painting	50.45
Cornwell and Kelty, hdw.	39.90
D. L. Gregg, do.	80.86
Barker Bros., merchandise	99.85
Plumbing	85.20
West Disinfecting Co.	53.00
Remington typewriters	225.00
Cass and Smurr, merchandise	30.80
Secretary's work	20.00
Manual training equipment	569.95
Hoffman Marks Co., mdse.	12.85
E. A. Josslyn, painting, etc.	172.75
Byrkit, supplies	12.75
Tuning piano	5.50
Electrical supplies	9.30

The right of school supply dealer E. C. Stewart of Stockton to buy text books from the state has been declared forfeited by the superintendent of public instruction at Sacramento.

Complaint came from Mono county that Stewart was demanding a higher price for books than that fixed by law. In the remote mountain counties where there are few local dealers the pupils must often order by mail. Investigation showed that Stewart has been active in soliciting mail orders in such localities, charging the full postpaid price to pupils, with an extra postage added for good measure. By this means he was charging the pupils postage twice, to the increase of his profits.

But this is a clear violation of the law, which is intended to make sure that all children, wherever they may live, shall get their text books at a low and uniform price fixed according to law. Further than this, it is a violation of the affidavit sworn to by every dealer before he can purchase books from the state.

BRIDGE WHIST CLUB.

A gathering of the Bridge Whist Club was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. Will McKinney of Tropico.

A dainty and inviting luncheon was first served to the members, after which a very delightful afternoon was enjoyed at the card tables.

The members were all present, with the exception of Mrs. A. S. Lewis, who has been called to Mexico because of severe illness in the family.

Mrs. Menzo Williams of North Central avenue was among the guests at the luncheon given by Mrs. Joseph Hainsworth of Monterey avenue, Pasadena, on Friday.

ST. MARK'S GUILD.

There will be a Hallowe'en social at the home of E. M. Witt, 1457 W. Fourth street. Admission ten cents. St. Mark's Guild ladies will have cider, pumpkin pies, doughnuts and coffee for sale. Annexation Election Returns Canvassed—Fire District and Fertilizer Works Discussed—Street Lighting Project

All members present.

The members resolved themselves into an election board and canvassed officially the returns of the annexation election of Oct. 14th. The result was the passing of a resolution announcing the result of said election, as published heretofore. Demands approved. Committee on amendment of ordinance regarding fire district number one, made several recommendations. Committee to whom was referred question of application of Mr. Duff to establish a fertilizer works back of Salt Lake depot, requested another week's time. Matter of giving $100 to the directory publishers for advertising purposes was also deferred. The sum of $20 was allowed to cover the expenses of the health officer in making a visit to Santa Barbara in attendance at the League of California Municipalities.

Bids for city printing were opened and declared as follows:

GLENDALS NEWS, 20 cents an inch first and subsequent publications, and a bid of 20 cents an inch for printing and posting, put in by Frank S. Chase. As previously advised by their city attorney, the trustees recognized the fact that there is only one legally established newspaper in the city qualified under law to do this work, and therefore on motion of Mr. Lane the contract was awarded to the GLENDALE NEWS in accordance with bid submitted, by unanimous vote. Trustee Lane read a resolution favoring the selection of a cite at Echo Park for the normal school, which after a discussion over fine distinctions as to the phraseology, brought up by Mr. Coker, was adopted. Mr. Lane brought up the question of immediately extending the electric light system into the newly annexed territory on the West Side. It developed in the debate over the matter that the Pacific Light and Power Co. and Mr. L. C. Brand have to be dealt with also in the matter, so that there are a number of details to be worked out before this extension can be made. A notice of intention to make certain electric light improvements along portions of Fourth street, Brand boulevard and Glendale avenue, and to form an assessment district to bear the expense of same, was read and adopted. The specifications for this work were presented by the manager of the lighting department for information of bidders and others. The estimated cost of the improvement is $1.00 per front foot which will be borne by owners of frontage, the city to stand the expense of making the connections and doing the underground work.

The street superintendent reported some of the delay in getting work started on Sixth street was due to the troubles of the Carr Company which are now in court; but that he had arranged for this to be fixed by payment of amount due that property owner, into the court.

The tax collector reported collected for past week $481.78, making total collections $1318.68.

HALLOWE'EN TO BE OBSERVED AT THE COUNTRY CLUB.

Glendale Country Club members are looking forward with especial zest to the card party which is to be held in the club parlors on Tuesday evening.

Aside from the regular entertainment of cards, Hallowe'en stunts and features will contribute to the general enjoyment, and the club will be decorated in a truly appropriate fashion.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Temple will be host and hostess of the affair, and are exercising their utmost ingenuity to make the evening one that will be long remembered as one of the very pleasantest of the many delightful social affairs held in the club.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Regular meeting tonight (Friday) in I. O. O. F. hall. A full attendance of members is desired.

E. H. Owen and Co. will move from their present quarters on Brand boulevard to 1106 West Fourth street November 1st.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

The club met Tuesday afternoon at the Country Club house. A large audience enjoyed the splendid accommodations found there. The prospect is bright for a prosperous year in every way. Eleven applications for membership have been received, and it is hoped there will be many more on Charter Day. At the business meeting which preceded the program Mrs. R. L. Hinchley introduced a resolution favoring the Echo Park site, Los Angeles, for the proposed State Normal School building. The resolution was passed unanimously. Mrs. J. H. Wells offered the following resolution, which was endorsed by the club:

"Resolution of appreciation of the Reverend S. L. Ward. Resolved, that in consequence of the removal from Glendale of the Rev. and Mrs. Ward, we, the members of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, express sincere regret and voice our appreciation of this gentleman's genial Christian character, educational attainments, broad and unusual experience, willing and efficient helpfulness in the betterment of the community and world, and that we extend to the Rev. and Mrs. Ward, our sister in the club, our appreciation of their hospitality extended and of various instructive and entertaining talks given by Mrs. Ward. May blessings attend them and their family always."

Mrs. James Gee gave the following list of books chosen for the year's study by the literary section: Henrik Ibsen, "A Doll's House" and "Pillars of Society"; Edmond Rostund, "Chanticler" and "Cyrano de Bergerac"; Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, "The Dawn of Tomorrow" and review of "The Story of an African Farm"; Henry Van Dyke, "House of Remmon" and "The Toiling of Feliz"; Henry Sorderman, "The Joy of Living" and "John the Baptist."

In addition to the study there will be a fifteen-minute parliamentary drill once a month.

The programme for the afternoon opened with a splendid four-hand piano composition, Golkehalps' "La Radieuse" concert waltz, which was admirably played by our well-known local piano teacher, Clarence C. Krenbill, assisted by one of his Glendale pupils, Miss Vera Kimball. Their rendition of the difficult selection captivated the audience and was a fine exhibition of ability and technique on the part of the teacher and talent and training on the part of the pupil.

Mrs. Henry J. Martin read an instructive paper on "General Philanthropy," and Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson spoke of the "Object and Aim of the Philanthropic Committee." The special work of the committee will be assisting the Children's Hospital, King's Daughters' Day Nursery and Miss Vance's Home for Boys. The club is especially interested in the King's Daughters' Day Nursery, having furnished and caring for the matron's room. Mrs. McCann in a charming manner sang "Three Green Bonnets," by D' Hardelot, and responded to an encore with "Creole Love Song," by Edgar Brith, Mr. J. T. Anderson accompanying at the piano.

Mrs. Evans added to the pleasure of the afternoon by the reading of Paul Lawrence Durbais' poem, "Breaking the Charm."

Miss Ester Sinclair closed the programme with a well rendered piano solo, "Fanfare Militaire," J. Oscher. In response to an encore she played "Impatience, Stephen Heller, Op. 40.

The next meeting, November 14, Charter Day, will be held in Filger's Opera House. Dr. Robert J. Burdette, lecturer. Everybody is invited to attend. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged those not members of the club.

TWICE ARRESTED.

Arthur J. Hesse was arrested last Friday morning by Officer Everett charged with trespass in having gone upon the property of a neighbor and attempting to haul away a building. He was taken before Judge Melrose who enjoined him from trespassing. Hesse disregarded the injunction and again attempted to remove the building, and was again arrested. This time he was fined $100 for contempt of court. He gave a check in payment of the fine and is said to have stopped payment on it before presented at the bank. The case came up again before Judge Melrose last Wednesday and went over until Nov. 8th pending action by the district attorney.

The Walker Realty Co. have sold a lot on Louise street, north of First street, to Florence Anderson, who will build thereon a six-room bungalow. Also a lot on Isabel street, between Second and Third, to a local investor. Through this agency the Vert Mont hotel, on Fourth street, which has been vacant for a short time, has been leased to a former proprietor of the Radium Hot Springs hotel, and it will be reopened at once. Work on the new block, corner of Fourth and Brand, is delayed by failure to get material, and tenants are being delayed in removals.

FOURTH STREET PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION.

The association met Thursday afternoon and experienced one of the pleasanest gatherings since its organization.

While the plan for the afternoon's entertainment was simple, it was thoroughly enjoyable, and awakened one and all to an even deeper interest in the organizatio's work and purpose.

The first part of the meeting was devoted to the business of the society, and Mrs. R. W. Meeker, president, outlined the work for the coming year. Among other plans was one by which certain afternoons were to be set aside for fashioning infants' garments. At Christmas time, if any Glendale family can be found in need of such, they will be presented with them; if not, they will be donated to the use of the maternity cottage in Los Angeles which is supported by the various Parent-Teacher Associations.

A large box is to be established in the school, where garments of all kinds can be deposited, which will be disposed of in the same fashion.

A short musical programme rendered by the pupils of the school added greatly to the pleasure of the day.

Mrs. W. S. Carmichael was hostess of the afternoon, and completed the enjoyment of the occasion by serving delicious, dainty refreshments.

RECITAL OF THE WESSENDORF SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

On Friday evening, October 20, the pupils of the Wesesndorf School of Music entertained their friends and patrons with one of the most successful recitals ever given in Glendale.

DISGRACEFUL ROAD

Conditions at Arden avenue on Brand boulevard are certainly not only disgraceful, but dangerous. Last March the concrete work put in by the county on the west side of the P. E. tracks was washed out by a freshet, and that side of the boulevard has been closed to the public ever since, there being a chasm where there should be a road. All travel has been forced to the east side of the railroad tracks, and instead of an effort being made to keep that one track in passable condition, it has been allowed to become a dip filled with loose sand, the dread of automobile drivers and of all drivers of vehicles generally. To make it worse, the railroad company has run a spur track from their line down into the wash on the east side, and hauls gravel cars out over it. A short time ago a carload of sand was dumped into the roadway by an accident to a car, and left where it fell, to be gradually worn down by passing vehicles, after stalling several autos that ran into it. The railway company disclaims any responsibility for anything, and in making repairs to its bridge, which almost went down in the freshet alluded to, has merely done the work that seemed absolutely necessary to keep its tracks intact. It is undrstood that the county authorities, as represented by Supervisor Pridham, have been trying to induce the railway people to join in putting a bridge over the wash at this point that would promise to stand up through ordinary weather conditions, and as the former refused to do anything except "protect their right of way," the result seems to be a deadlock, in which the traveling public and the immediate neighborhood are caught between the two opposing forces. As long as it does not rain liberally, there is no particular danger of great damage to anyone, except indirectly, but the beginning of the rainy season will convert the situation into an actual menace to nearby property. The huge chunks of concrete left from the wreck of the wall on the west side still lie where they fell, while on the east side, close to the railroad tracks, any flood of water coming down the wash falls over a wall six or eight feet high to the base of the bridge piling, where it will quickly wash out the substructure and let the present concrete wall down into the stream, with a good probability of damming up the stream with the wreckage of the railroad bridge. In addition to all these menacing conditions, the lately erected bridge of the Burbank extension stands half a block below to afford a second dam, that will undoubtedly, in the case of a heavy rain such as frequently occurs, turn the stream out of its channel and work great injury to nearby property owners. To a man up a tree it looks as if both county authorities and the railroad company are tempting Providence by laying the foundation for damage suits in the near future.

The "Social Afternoon" last Friday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Willisford was largely attended and all present enjoyed themselves. The rooms were prettily decorated. A short program of music and readings was rendered as follows: piano solo, Carol Willisford; vocal solos, Mrs. Sherman of Alhambra; readings, Mrs. Willisford; piano selections, Miss Olney of Los Angeles.

Refreshments were served Mrs. Willisford being assisted by Mrs. Yard and Misses Adams and Pebbles.

Mr. and Mr. J. D. Ashbaugh of Los Angeles spent a few days with their daughter, Mrs. Willisford.

Mrs. F. J. Lane, mother of O. A. Lane, city trustee, has returned from a summer's sojourn in the East and Canada, where she spent a delightful summer, and returns in better health than for many years past. Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Frazee, parents of Mrs. O. A. Lane, have recently arrived in Glendale, where they design to make their home. For the present they are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lane at their home on Chestnut street.

Business is good at the Salt Lake depot this week. Galley and Clark, contractors for the good roads section of highway between Glendale and Pasadena, are having from three to six carloads of broken rock brought in daily from the San Dimas quarries. Each carload averages about fifty tons. Cars are being unloaded promptly and the work is reported as progressing rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Lusby of Maryland avenue were the host and hostess of a charmingly appointed dinner given Saturday evening in their home. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hopkins of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Emory of Kenwood street, and Mrs. G. McGrager of Colorado Springs.

The Los Angeles Friday Morning Club has appointed one of their Glendale members, Mrs. Mary H. Gridley of Brand boulevard, as a delegate to attend the District Federation of Clubs which is to be held in Ventura on the 16th, 17th and 18th of November.

Frank Showalter is off on a hunting trip to the Elizabeth Lake region, having left Saturday last to be gone a week. N. C. Thomas of Verdugo Canyon is also playing Nimrod in the same locality.

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE doors offered but a brief resistance after the two guards had been beaten down and torn and snarled over, and then the dust blackened mob came bursting in, at their head Lillian Breed, the incarnation of wild atavic gypsyhood, the incarnation of all the evil things that are red.

"Welcome to our home!" she cried, and, thrusting her left arm beneath that of Blagg, she wheeled with him into the library, while their followers poured after them like a foul flood throughout the house.

"Help yourselves, my good friends," she shouted. "The house is yours and all that it contains, even to its unwelcoming hosts, if you find them."

In the library Blagg jumped upon the very table which Breed had so lately quitted and clapped his hands for silence.

"Order there!" he shouted and stamped heavily with his nail studded heel upon the polished mahogany of the table top.

"Who orders order?" roared a half drunken tinner who had already secured a decanter from the dining room and now crowded into the door. His face was blackened with powder smoke. He raised the decanter to his lips and took a long pull of the liquor. "Who orders order? Orders are for slaves! I defy orders!"

"WHY, LOOK WHO'S HERE!" SHE CRIED.

A lean little man with eyes as sharp as steel needles suddenly whipped a knife from his belt and stabbed the tinner in the throat. He fell without a groan. Those around him only laughed, but order was obtained.

"This is business in the name of liberty and equality!" commanded Blagg. "Hold yourselves in restraint. Remember that we came here to get a billion and a half of dollars for the cause. Every one of you must help us to carry it from here, and remember that we have all sworn to kill the first man who tries to make away with any of it or to appropriate a dollar to his own uses. After we have established equality and fraternity then every man may do as he likes, but tonight we must act for the commonweal. Come forward as your names are called."

They came to him as he called until he had named a score.

"That is all for now," he directed. "The rest of you wait here in your detachments of tens until you are called from below."

Lillian had stood at the side of the fireplace, her hand upon the knob of the little door which led into her grandfather's retiring room. Now Blagg jumped down from the table to her side, and together they threw open the door. Lillian broke out instantly into a shrill laugh.

"Why, look who's here!" she cried. "If it isn't my dear old friend, Mrs. Rensselaer."

Mrs. Rensselaer stepped back from her vain attempts to bolt the door. With her gray hair and her neat gown and her calm dignity she overawed Lillian for a moment, and then anger came as a natural reaction.

"Why, how delightful!" said Lillian, with mock suavity. "Mrs. Rensselaer, you must come out and let me introduce you to some of my friends. Ladies," she called, "I am going to turn Mrs. Rensselaer over to the reception committee."

The women, hideous travesties of their sex in all their grim frowsiness and excitement, grinned and pressed forward.

"This is Mrs. Rensselaer," continued Lillian, dragging forth her many years' companion. "She is the last lady of one of our very, very oldest families. None of her ancestry has worked since America was a nation. Her nephew is General Rensselaer, who is commander in chief of the army of Emperor Kelvin, Phillip I.! I know you will enjoy her society."

A mere slip of a girl, thin and formless, but whose face already bore the unmistakable traces of living death, laughed a shrill laugh and with a soiled cap that had once been a boy's slapped Mrs. Rensselaer across the face.

Flushing crimson with the indignity, Mrs. Rensselaer turned to Lillian, but she had neither time to protest nor need of it, for Lillian, obeying another of the sudden tigerish impulses to which in the past week she had wholly given herself, changed her attitude completely and with blazing eyes rushed between Mrs. Rensselaer and her tormentors.

"That will do!" she cried. "Mrs. Rensselaer was my friend for a great many years and treated me more patiently than I deserved. She is my guest now and must be respected as such. Mrs. Rensselaer, sit here," and she seated her one time social tutor and sponsor behind the library table in the chair that Breed had lately vacated. "Whitney! Gaspar! Williams! Harvey! Perth! Green! Stand around this table and protect her from any further insults in my name! As for you"—and she turned to the young woman who had slapped Mrs. Rensselaer; her eyes narrowed and grew cold as she confronted the girl—"take her out and throw her in the lake," she directed.

Two men, laughing cruelly, seized hold of her and began dragging her toward the door.

"But I can't swim!" shrieked the girl.

"That's why I am having you thrown in the lake," said Lillian coolly. "The rest of you will take note by this that Mrs. Rensselaer is to be protected."

She started back toward the door of the smaller room. The girl, struggling against the two who had her in charge, suddenly burst into a stream of vituperative profanity so vicious that even Lillian, inured as she was by the past week's experience to language of the sort, shuddered.

"I must have your rings and your brooch, I think, Mrs. Rensselaer," said she, and, swiftly going behind the table, she disengaged the diamond cluster from Mrs. Rensselaer's throat and stripped the rings from the unresisting fingers. Even as she did this her mood changed again, and she whispered, "It is the best thing for you." Taking the jewels in her hand, she cried, "A gift from aristocracy to equality and fraternity!" and she tossed them in the air.

A hundred hands reached for them as they came down, and a clamor of excited voices told how popular that action had been.

"Come on," she said; "we have work to do." And, followed by Blagg and his score of picked men, she hurried through the little rear room.

They found the closet door open and its rear wall pushed back, revealing the narrow secret staircase. Single file they hurriedly descended this, Lillian at the head, and turned into the wide cemented vestibule where an electric light was already burning. Lillian dropped down before the combination knob and turned it carefully backward and forward several times.

"I feared so," she said to Blagg, who knelt beside her. "The combination has been changed."

Blagg took the knob in his long, sensitive fingers and, not looking at it, bent his ear close to it, while Lillian laid her bare arm loosely across his shoulders. He turned the knob slowly and gently, he stopped and turned it backward, slowly and gently, and then smiled as he gave the ring of the door a clutch and pulled. The door came open.

"It's a good thing that I practiced those long, long hours every night on that sample knob in my room upstairs," he said as he went on to the next one.

Slowly, but with remarkable skill, he worked his way through the four iron doors until, with Lillian by his side, he had thrown the last one open, and there in the vault, with a great pile of gold and bills scattered thickly about him, with his robe and crown still on and his scepter in his hand, stood Henry Breed.

"Cash!" he cried. "Cash! The greatest force in all the world! The great social dynamo! The golden lever of Archimedes! Cash! Salute your master, Cash, loyal subjects, and your master's master, the king of Cash!"

"Grandfather," said Lillian, hurrying to him, "come with me. We want to put this money away and lock it up so no one can get it. See, you have left all the doors open!"

The babble of voices from the upper part of the house caused him to straighten up, and his dim old eyes grew wide.

"Hush! They are coming!" he said. "They shan't have it!" he suddenly screamed. "It is mine! Mine! Every dollar of it!"

He rushed toward the door to close it, but he stumbled and fell upon the floor and lay quite still.

As soon as Henry Breed was carried out there was room for the full score of men in the big vault, and Blagg called them all in by name, each one as he came forward loosing two long brown sacks from about his middle.

Eagerly the men began filling their sacks, with many exclamations of animal gratification as the silken feel of the paper and the metallic touch of the metal glided through their fingers.

In the house above the gentlemen and ladies of equality and fraternity had hunted out the stores of food and liquor. These dispatched, they swarmed over the house like rats, seeking what they might pilfer or destroy. They searched with almost whining eagerness in every nook and cranny large enough to conceal human life.

F. H. CHERRY

306 Brand Boulevard Glendale, Cal.

They did not find Zelphan, but they did find Jens, and he faced them and fought and died standing, as he had preferred.

Had he remained concealed for but a few brief moments he might still have lived, for there came suddenly upon the big gray house a new and a terrible sound, borne by swift, shadowy engines that swept upward along the wide curving driveway almost noiseless, except for a rush and a whir. Out of the purring silence they burst upon the rabble outside with a sharp rattling hailstorm of leaden death.

Kelvin and his squad of flying Gatlings had arrived, and close behind him trotted the detachment that had been bivouacked nearest the gates. He mowed down men as if they had been weeds. Stalwart men in khaki carried a Gatling and planted it in the very doorway, pouring its deadly blight back into the hall. They set it up next at the library door and swept that room as bare and clear of living humanity as if a flood had washed it out, while the men in khaki swarmed through the house, pursuing the followers of Blagg into bloody corners and exterminating them as if they had been vermin. A detachment, with Rensselaer and Kelvin in the lead, stepped over the ghastly, huddled heaps in the library, hurried back through the little room and poured down the narrow secret stairway. As they had swept through the library Rensselaer had caught a brief glimpse of a gray haired woman in a black silk gown, with her head upon her folded arms, sitting at the table, but the picture was confused with others of its riddled and useless kind, and he hurried on ahead.

Kelvin had promised himself to be in the lead as they went down the stairway, but as he turned into the closet entrance a huge black form thrust itself in before him, and Sam led the way, unarmed except for the formidable weapons with which nature had provided him.

The greedy garnerers of Breed's golden harvest were taken by complete surprise. They turned from their tasks as the men in khaki streamed in upon them, but their weapons had been laid aside, and they had only bags of money with which to fight, and these were too heavy.

Sam was shouting aloud. An irresistible demon, he clutched first one thin throat in his mighty hands and cracked it and threw the limp, resistless body aside and sprang for another, and the second man to fall before his savage onslaught was Ben White.

Blagg, with a mighty oath, sprang for Kelvin, who had entered just behind Sam, but one of Rensselaer's lieutenants was quick enough to intercept him. Blagg gradually bent his assailant backward and in the act managed to draw the lieutenant's pistol from its holster. In place of turning it upon his own antagonist he leveled it over the man's shoulder straight at Kelvin.

It was Sam who, shouting in a fever of savage joy, saw that motion and sprang to wrest the pistol from Blagg, receiving in his own breast the three bullets that the firearm yet contained. Then, his work done, he fell heavily to the floor, and upon his face was fixed forever that same sardonic grin that displayed all his snarling yellow teeth.

Kelvin, spent with his own efforts, stood erect to breathe for a moment, and in that moment a needle sharp dagger was thrust into his side. He tottered and fell, and above him knelt Lillian Breed, while before his eyes she held the dagger.

"See!" she cried. "This was your emblem of triumph! This was the sign in which you were to conquer! This was the instrument that twice threatened you and twice failed, but the third time it wins. Phillip, you made but one mistake. Had you put me at your side as your empress in this sign," and she held the dagger point upward, "we would have conquered the world, but you repudiated me, and in this sign you die!"

A soldier struck the dagger from her hand and bound her arms behind her, as those of Blagg had already been bound. Rensselaer, unscathed, looked down upon Phillip, with tears moistening his eyes.

"Take him out carefully, boys," he said, "but get him into the air quickly!"

As they passed through the library Rensselaer's eye happened to rest again upon that motionless, gray haired woman at the library table, struck down by his own Gatling, and as he recognized her he turned faint and almost dropped his burden.

"Here," he told one of his men, "help carry him. I cannot."

He almost stumbled into the outer air, and the men followed him with Kelvin, and, covering him to the breast with a sheet hastily snatched from Breed's couch, laid the first and last emperor of America flat upon the porch at the edge of the steps, where the cooling breeze might blow upon his brow. He lay pale and rigid under the yellow porch light, and this yellow light was in a moment more augmented by a saffron glare that flared out as the roof, from a fire in the attic, started by the recent vandals, broke into a blaze.

Startled, in the glare of the burning roof Rensselaer saw a host of men with fixed bayonets suddenly spring out of the dark shrubbery at the north west side of the building and come tearing down upon them.

"Halt! For God's sake, halt!" he cried, waving the white sheet that he had snatched from across Kelvin. "A truce! For God's sake, Rollins, halt your men! This madness is all over! Kelvin is dead!"

Within but a few feet of what must otherwise have been a desperate struggle the advancing column was checked, and Rollins heard briefly from the sickened Rensselaer what had happened. He strode up the steps and stood before Kelvin with bared head.

"Only mistaken," he said in benediction and forgiveness. Then he turned to his own followers and those of Rensselaer. "As president of the United States, vice Kelvin, I have become your chief commanding officer," he told them. "Kelvin is dead, but the republic still lives. Blagg and his consort will die this morning, and with them the rebellion is broken. Some restrictive legislation to be carefully and wisely considered must be made to keep down such appalling accumulations of wealth as may threaten our liberty and our republic. But, gentlemen, through it all the constitution of the United States still is sacred and supreme, and there," his voice took on a sudden ring of exultation—"and there waves its everlasting emblem!"

One grizzled old veteran of Sumner Rollins' ranks had brought with him a tattered old American flag that had gone through the war of the north and south and had unfurled its war stained stars and stripes to their gaze. There was a cheer, but only a feeble one. The men, almost with one accord, took off their hats, and moisture stood in their eyes.

A strange figure appeared among them. Old Henry Breed, still clad in his mockery of royal raiment, staggered to the door. In his fall and through all that succeeded it his hands had convulsively gripped his money, and he still held it, green and orange, in his fingers.

"Cash!" his shrill old voice quavered as he flaunted it in the air. "Cash! The greatest force in all the world! The power that can totter thrones and disrupt governments. Cash! The lifeblood of commerce! The golden lever of Archimedes! Cash!"

He stopped to laugh shrilly and allowed a soldier to seat him in a chair, where he drooled off into a jibbering mumbling. As he left the doorway his place was taken by Dr. Zelphan. Both hands were filled with shawl strapped packages of his precious manuscript. He looked down at Breed a moment in contemplative pity.

"He will die the way he is now," said he. "His once remarkable brain is mere mush. He was a wonderful study, a most wonderful study, and the nearest approach to an absolute monarch of any resident of this globe. In the meantime, gentlemen, America has had her orgasm, and her nerves will be quieter now. I bid you good day. I am going to Switzerland." And he strode down the drive and around the trees at the bend.

Running around the corner came Elsie White, who had been bidden to stay back in safety, but who could not, and Rollins drew her to his side. The wind, blowing away some fleecy clouds, revealed in the east the first rosy glow of coming day, and the same grim old veteran who had brought with him the war stained battleflag broke in trembling accents into a song that cleared the still quivering air of the fevered "Marseillaise," that was caught up by a mighty chorus of newly freed men, that was at once the requiescat of Kelvin, a benediction and the promise of a new birth for the republic he had almost throttled:

Oh, say, can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?

According to Orders.

In employing men to work at his Palo Alto farm in California the late Senator Stanford gave strict orders that they were never to strike, kick or whip a horse. On one occasion, while at dinner, one of the drivers insisted that he must see the senator. He was ushered in, with blood over his face, which was badly cut. "John knocked me down," explained the man, referring to one of the trainers. "What did you do?" asked the senator. "Nothing," replied the man. "But you must have done something. I want the truth," persisted the senator. "Well, I only kicked a horse," growled the man, "and John knocked me down." "Those were John's instructions," said the senator emphatically, "and he did just right."

Gallant.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt once told of a gallant to whom she had been introduced. "His compliments," she said, "were so glowing that at last I cried out:

"'But, monsieur, remember, I am sixty-four years old!'

"'Madam,' he replied, 'to me you are just thirty-two, for I, seared as I have been by scandal, am too charitable ever to believe more than half of what I hear.'"

Happiness does not consist in things so much as in thoughts.

CO-OPERATION TO REDUCE PRICES

Movement to Bring Producer and Retailer Together.

BASED ON ROCHDALE PLAN.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

At last a movement has been started in America that may get somewhere in the matter of solving the problem of high prices. It is a modification of the co-operative stores system, originating in England and now in existence in many nations of Europe. In England it is known as the Rochdale plan, which is familiar to most readers, at least by name. In America members of the grange are the prime movers, working with a number of business men, who have organized to bring the producer and retailer together, thus cutting out the middlemen. The plan is first to be tried out in New York and if a success there will be extended to every large city in the country.

The granges of the states of New York and Pennsylvania are already enlisted in the campaign, and it is the hope of those in charge that members of the order throughout the nation will fall in line. Indeed, the ultimate design is to get the farmers generally interested, whether they belong to the organization or not. The claim is made that the farmers now receive only a small per cent of the price charged the consumer. There is a margin of 100, 200 and even 300 per cent or more, and most of this enormous profit goes to the middlemen. By bringing the producer and retailer together the price to the farmer will be increased and that to the consumer reduced. This is the theory at least, and that it will work out in practice is proved by the co-operative system abroad and by the grange stores already in existence. These present grange stores are small potatoes, however, compared to the immense system now planned. They were intended for members of the organization alone. The new scheme is for everybody.

To Conquer New York.

The head men in the undertaking have already organized themselves into what they call the United Stores association. This has been going on quietly for more than a year laying the groundwork. Now it is ready to begin active operations. There was considerable difficulty in financing the venture, presumably for the reason that enormous business interests would naturally oppose a co-operative undertaking. Money was finally raised in Philadelphia, and now the association claims a solid financial backing. New York offices have been established.

Some of the big men in the venture are C. Paul Hagenlocher, the president, who is a banker and director in various concerns, including the Lackawanna Coal and Lumber company, the Tippecanoe Securities company and the Republic Trust company; Roland Onnfroy, first vice president and chairman of the executive committee, doctor in sciences, literature and law, ex-member of the chambers of commerce of San Francisco and Seattle, former vice president and general manager of Pacific American fisheries, former vice president and general manager Le Patrimoine Life and Accident Insurance company and the real father of the plan; Patrick Egan, second vice president, who was once minister to Chile; Walter S. Pope, treasurer, former eastern manager of the Royal Baking Powder company; E. F. Olmsted, secretary and director of publicity, former advertising manager of Shredded Wheat company, also of the H-O company, and ex-secretary of the board of trade of Niagara Falls; George T. Powell of the New York state grange, and J. W. Kjelgaard of the Pennsylvania state grange—quite an imposing array of names, especially when compared with the twenty-eight poor weavers who started the Rochdale plan in England and who had to save up several months before they had $140 to open their first tiny basement store. The world moves, however, and this is America and the twentieth century. We travel faster now, and it takes money to oil the wheels. It required long years for the Rochdale weavers to make a dent on the business system of England, and these United Stores and grange folks expect to do big things right away.

Charge of the Grange Brigade.

When ready to launch the enterprise publicly fifty grangers from Pennsylvania descended on New York, gave a banquet or two, visited the mayor, who made one of his best speeches, started the Bush Terminal stores in South Brooklyn as a central distributing station, and the first thing any one knew the New York newspapers awakened to the fact that there was something new on earth. The reduction of prices is a popular subject in the metropolis, for probably at no point on the planet's surface are prices higher. Therefore the proposition to lower prices naturally appeals to the readers of these papers, and hence to the papers themselves. Also when the mayor gives the best speech of his administration to a delegation that delegation must be noticed in the public prints. The result of all this was that the fifty Pennsylvania grangers got scare heads and good stories. They were not exactly first page features, but neither were they buried. One of the big papers played them up for three columns and a cartoon, and others did almost as well. They were only ignored by the organs generally believed to be under trust domination. The plan was even editorialized. In other words, the undertaking had "arrived." It requires a body of some size and velocity to make a dent in the consciousness of New York, but the co-operative store proposition had both the size and the speed. The dent followed as a natural sequence. After the thing gets under way, if it follows the course of co-operation in other lands, the dent will grow larger and deeper. Said one New York paper:

Cut Out the Middlemen.

"The elimination of the middlemen and the reduction of the cost of living to its lowest possible level is the slogan of fifty farmers of New York and Pennsylvania in session at the Grand hotel. The delegates, who represent the United Stores association, Grangers, Dealers and Consumers' union, say they are speaking for 1,000,000 farmers.

"A reduction of 40 per cent in the price to consumers of market produce is what they say they are going to accomplish.

"This is to be effected by establishing in New York city a market or distributing station to handle the produce of thousands of farms. This station will sell to retailers direct.

"The United Stores, Grangers, Dealers and Consumers' association, according to an announcement made by representative delegates, has a fund on hand of more than $1,000,000, with potential resources of $5,000,000, as 600,000 farmers are ready to pay an extra assessment of $5 if it becomes necessary. The association, it is said, will not even stop at an expense of $4,000,000 to carry out its plans.

"Among the delegates arrived in the city and prominent in the advance work are J. W. Kjelgaard, C. Paul Hegenlocher, Roland Onnfroy, W. T. Creasy, Matthew J. Smith, E. V. Dorset and George T. Powell.

"'We have formed this association,' said Mr. Kjelgaard, 'in the belief that the farmer can do away with the trusts by the simple expedient of placing his wares on the market himself. All he needs for this is a selling organization, and this is possible to him if he will only co-operate with other farmers.

"'Our organization has been worked out on this plan, and we are now ready to begin after a year of preparation. The farmers of the whole country are behind us, and it is incredible that we should fail.

"'The present high cost of living is due to nothing else than a lack of farmer co-operation. We farmers have had our eyes opened at last, and we are now embarked on what we believe will prove a solution of one of the greatest problems that now vex the country.'"

Americanized Co-operation.

One of the chief points urged by those in control of this movement is that co-operation has previously failed in this country because it was not Americanized. The English system made the retail stores a part of the machinery and to that extent stifled the individual initiative of each dealer. Under the new plan the proposal is to leave the retail stores free. All the co-operative movement proposes to do is to have the farmer sell direct to the retailer. In return for the opportunity to do this the retailer is bound to give honest weight and measure and good goods. In addition he is bound to divide profits with the customer, arranged on the basis of certificates of sale, the same as in the Rochdale plan.

One of the effects of the campaign for lower prices has already appeared in the New York milk situation. The problem of cheap and sanitary milk has long been acute in the metropolis, as it is in most large cities. As a result of a move made by the United Stores association and following the plan proposed by it of bringing together producer and retailer, a meeting was recently held that threw a scare into the milk trust and brought a ray of light to thousands of consumers. Following is a partial account of the meeting given by a New York newspaper:

"A secret session of the Dairymen's league, incorporated, was held at the United States hotel, Newburg, N. Y., to listen to offers made by some men from New York, who expressed a desire to co-operate with the members of the league and handle their entire product.

"The plan that was suggested at the meeting is to form a co-operative association composed of producers and distributers and thereby eliminate the middlemen. Definite action on the proposition was deferred pending an investigation by a committee headed by the league president, John Y. Gerrow of Washingtonville.

"The New York men, who were referred to as capitalists, asserted that they had unlimited capital to back them and were fully able to dispose of all the milk produced by the members of the Dairymen's league. They asserted that they control 500 distributing points. Their plan is to deliver the products of the farm and dairy from the producer as directly as possible to the consumer.

"By eliminating the middlemen they pointed out the cost of handling the milk under the contemplated co-operative plan would be materially decreased. The percentage of decrease, the promoters said, would permit them to reduce the price to the consumers and yet enable the farmers to get more for their output.

Control Milk In Five States.

"The members of the Dairymen's league are interested principally in milk. It developed that the New York state grange and the Pennsylvania state grange already have under consideration similar propositions with reference to other farm products. In every case, it was said, the promoters who submitted the proposition to the Dairymen's league are behind the project.

"Members of the league say they cannot see why the consumers should pay 8 cents a quart for milk and the producers get only 3 cents a quart. In discussing this phase Mr. Gerrow, president of the league, said:

"'The farmer is not getting enough for his products, and the consumer is paying too much. The farmer has got to get more, and the consumer should not be compelled to pay more and, in fact, cannot afford to pay more; hence it is up to us to reduce the cost to the consumer and increase the receipts of the producer. If we do not do it some one will some day, and we may just as well begin now.'

"The Dairymen's league represents five states—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut—and its members produce most of the milk used by the consumers in those respective states."

This effort, not only as it relates to milk, but to all farm products, will naturally spread throughout the land, and the hope of those behind it is that farmers and retailers in all sections of the country will take it up.

That it is high time is made plain by the fact that prices of commodities are again advancing. Potatoes, flour, meat, practically all the necessaries of life, are included in this latest increase. In the case of potatoes the excuse is given that the crop is short, but this cannot be urged in the case of flour and meat. The conclusion is unavoidable that this boosting of prices is brought about by combinations for purposes of gain. It will bear especially on the poor. There is but one way of escape from this intolerable condition, and that is co-operation. The producers and consumers must get together.

"WE'VE CARRIED YOU FAR ENOUGH."

GLENDALE, CAL., OCTOBER 27, 1911

Brooks' comet is now visible to the naked eye above the eastern horizon about five o'clock in the morning. It is small, but brilliant, and as it is moving with great rapidity it will be visible but a short time.

The Sierra Madre News comes out as a six-column folio. The News is nothing if not progressive and now as formerly is typographically and editorially a high-class publication. May its shadow never grow less and its subscription list increase.

Leslie M. Shaw is quoted as saying that "Any man can make $1,000,000 and make it honestly if he has courage and aptitude." Now that we know just what is necessary, why longer delay? It does not pay to be poor just for the sake of being supposed to be honest!

Gov. Johnson has made an excellent appointment in making Prof. A. J. Cook of Claremont, horticultural commissioner. What Prof. Cook does not know about the bugs and things which almost pester the life out of the California fruit grower, is hardly worth mention.

Our local contemporary thinks that "ten cents an inch amounts to considerable during the year" in the price paid for city printing. So it does, and that is the reduction in price voluntarily made by this paper in its bid, notwithstanding it had no competition to meet.

The people of Eagle Rock have been agitating the question of securing a postoffice and the result seems to be that the majority of them prefer the old "R.F.D." service. The outcome of the agitation seems to indicate that the "commuter" predominates in the population of our neighboring city to the eastward.

Section 17 of the code of civil procedure of the state of California says; "Words used in the masculine gender include the female and neuter." This would seem to make the newly enfranchised woman a proper and legal subject for military, jury and poll tax duty. Ladies, two dollars, please!

The contract has been let for constructing a power line from Bishop, Cal., to San Bernardino, a distance of 250 miles, to carry electric power from Bishop Creek to Southern California. The six wires are to be supported on steel towers, eight to a mile, each of them 68 feet high. The cost of the line will be about $250,000.

That the political equality ladies are not entirely harmonious upon the liquor question is shown by the remarks of Miss Mary Foy, secretary of the Votes for Women Club. She said: "Personally, I do not think that a man commits a crime by taking a drink of liquor, but I do think that when a man goes into a saloon for a drink he should have some assurance that he is buying pure liquor and not poison."

Los Angeles has not been able to get a bid on its harbor bonds. There are two causes which probably account for this. One is the fear on the part of capitalists of the Socialists winning in the coming municipal contest, the other is the impression evidently created that a city which goes to the limit of its bonding privileges is not a first-class risk.

John Mitchell, a Chicago millionaire, is performing jury duty at a compensation of three dollars a day. It is creditable to Mr. Mitchell that he is willing to do this, for although as a matter of fact the men of his class should not be exempt from this duty, it is rarely that they are compelled to serve. Mr. Mitchell is quoted as expressing the opinion that the jury system is a farce; he must have heard about the McNamara trial.

The Los Angeles papers report that the county supervisors have decided that the Pacific Electric railway must put its tracks down to grade on certain road crossings in Glendale. This probably means that as the franchise or permit to cross county roads was granted the railway company by the supervisors before the city of Glendale came into existence, it still devolves upon the county authorities to see that the beneficiaries of the franchise comply with its provisions.

The death of Admiral Schley removes another figure conspicuous in our recent history. Although many look upon his being in temporary command of the U. S. fleet when the Spanish vessels were destroyed at Santiago, as a circumstance entitling him to special honor, in the opinion of many he rendered more conspicuous and meritorious service by his successful venture into the frozen North when he in almost the last hour of their extremity rescued Greeley and his companions from death by starvation

Persons not familiar with the literature of Socialism are frequently accused of being ignorant of the subject for that reason. Here is an extract from a card being circulated by the Socialists of Los Angeles, that should make the matter clear:

"Wipe out the superstitions that have been foisted upon you so long by the ruling class. Educate and organize yourselves on class lines and put summary end to class rule, class dependency and slavery." There now!

At last we find in one of our contemporaries an alleged reason for taking from the voters the power to elect railroad commissioners and allowing the governor to appoint them. It was to prevent the corporations from controlling them! It seems therefore that the wicked corporations can control the officials elected by the people, but those appointed by our impeccable governor have adamantine powers of resistance! They are also beyond the control of the people. Oh fallacious fudge!

It is reported that the route selected by the state highway commission for a road through the San Fernando valley is to come in from the north through the mouth of the Little Tejunga Canon; thence over through Sunland, Monte Vista, La Crescenta and La Canada to Pasadena. This would certainly be a fine thing for the section traversed, but it seems to be getting away from the idea of spending the money on main traveled roads. Is it a mere cincidence that Lieut. Gov. Wallace, E. T. Earle, ex-Senator Flint and H. E. Huntington have large property interests in La Canada?

EVANGELINE BOOTH.

In a time when so much energy is being misdirected in following out false ideas of what constitutes the religion that is "pure and undefiled," it is refreshing to hear the sweet words of wisdom and hope that fall from the lips of Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in the United States. She has no belief in modern man-made schemes for the regeneration of the world, but labors with whole-hearted sincerity and in the spirit of self-sacrifice for the salvation of the individual soul. She does not denounce the evil that is found in high places, but recognizes the fact that human nature among all the families of the race scattered over the face of the earth, all classes, colors and conditions, is a poor thing at best unless that spark of the divine that lives in every individual atom of it, is fanned into a flame that prompts to love and service.

LET EVERY WOMAN DO HER DUTY

The ladies are registering in large numbers in preparation for the performance of their duty at the polls. This is as it should be. Notwithstanding a very prevalent idea that the state of California has in the past been dominated by the railroad company in political affairs, because of a lack of laws giving power to the people, there never was a greater popular error. The people have always had laws enough and of a kind to enable them to exercise all necessary political power, but have failed to do it because they did not realize their political responsibility. And this will always be the case. Governments will not work automatically. The people may go on putting upon the statute books laws intended to regulate for the better every act of our daily life, but if the individual citizen does not do his or her full political duty with patriotism and intelligence, there will be no improvement in conditions. In the full flush of their enthusiasm over the newly acquired "right," the women of California may be expected to show great activity in political matters, and they should do so, but it is "the long pull and the strong pull" that wins the race.

PRESIDENT TAFT ON ARBITRATION.

There is no doubt but that the kind of oratory most popular in this muckraking period of our existence, is denunciatory, and therefore the speech of President Taft delivered at the banquet at the auditorium in Los Angeles last week will not just now strike a popular chord. His subject was the arbitration treaties which his administration has entered into with England and France which have not yet been confirmed by the senate. He called attention to arbitration treaties now in existence, the weakness of which is that they specifically except the submission to arbitration of "questions involving the national honor or vital interests." He shows clearly that no question is likely to involve war that is not of vital interest or does not affect national honor, and therefore such treaties are of no avail. He makes clear his ideas of practical statesmanship when he declares "What I would like to bring about is something that really means something in the way of arbitration, because if you do not have that you are making no step toward peace."

He sums up the difference between the present means of settling differences between nations and that which will prvail under arbitration, as follows: "If it is a question of national honor I would rather arbitrate it than have it fought out on the field of battle, and for this reason: When it is fought out on the field of battle it does not decide anything except that the nation that wins has a better army or better generals or better guns and the larger forces. In arbitration the question which arises is decided, if the arbitration is impartial, as it ought to be, and as it practically well may be—the question is then decided on the principles of law and equity, whether our honor has been infringed and if it has the decree gives us a reparation and furnishes us a remedy."

He drives home his logical argument in favor of arbitration as against war as follows:

"At common law—the lawyers who hear me know—and it is not more than 200 years since the plea was made in court, if a man sued you on a promissory note or a bond—I don't recollect the technicalities, but I think if he sued you on a tort on the grounds you had called him a liar, you might come into court and when he proposed to call witnesses say: "No, I demand the wager of battle," and then the judge brought out two long swords and a twenty-four foot ring was made and the defendant and the complainant went at it, and if the defendant cut off the plaintiff's head or his arm, that proved that he never signed that note or that he had paid. In the same way with respect to the bond, or if it was a slander case, it proved that the defendant was a liar because his head was cut off."

ENTHUSIASTIC RATIFICATION MASS MEETING.

(Contributed.)

As a fitting finale to the success of the Woman Suffrage amendment of the recent political campaign, a general jollification was held on Saturday night at Filger Opera house under the management of the Equal Suffrage Campaign League when brief speeches and inspiring music claimed the attention of the audience until a late hour.

The curtain rose to the patriotic strains of Star Spangled Banner, played by Mrs. Anderson, superintendent of music in the Glendale schools, and sung by Mrs. W. H. West, a recent acquisition to Glendale's musical circles, who for years has been an operatic singer with the Castle Garden and other opera companies.

Judge P. S. McNutt, chairman of the league, made a brief, entertaining address appropriate to the occasion, and in his introduction of each speaker and his frequent comments during the evening was most happy and resourceful.

Glendale including within her boundaries many of unusual talent and attainments, was represented from the various sections by a galaxy of bright, wise, witty, clever, capable, scholarly, interesting and eloquent set of speakers, each shining with an individuality all his own, and included Mrs. Mary H. Gaidley, the opening speaker, who for years has been a public worker in the East and who is prominently and actively conected with state and local work in California; Mrs. Sidney Dell, who accomplished an immense amount of work during the campaign and who brought from Mrs. Dawson, a pioneer suffrage worker, who was unable to be present, congratulations and encouraging words, which were unanimously acknowledged by the assembly by sending to her "Greetings and thanks for her wise, beautiful and inspiring words." The other ladies who spoke were Dr. Black, who spoke convincingly from her long, varied experience. Mrs. Wells, formerly for years a leader in various undertakings; Mrs. Woods, who in the recent campaign took an active part in speaking and writing in behalf of the eighth amendment, and Mrs. Haffner, a teacher of domestic science, the teaching of which from Boston to San Franciseo, has caused her to feel and know the public pulse upon the woman question.

The gentlemen who spoke were Attorney Mattison B. Jones, T. W. Watson, whom Chairman McNutt designated as the "George Washington of Glendale;" John Doyle, the youngest member of the campaign league committee; J. T. Anderson, supervising principal of the grammar schools; Mr. Fram, Dr. Hunt, Mr. Gilhousen, Prof. Howe, assistant principal of the Glendale Union high school, and Mr. Belden.

The two to five minute speeches were interspersed by singing by Mrs. Della May Orth, a charming favorite, accompanied by Miss Laura Willford Brown, and songs in English and from Italian operas by Mrs. West, accompanied by Mrs. Anderson, and "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," sung with taste and spirit by Mrs. Anderson.

A charming feature of the program were two artistically executed minuets from Mozart, and one dainty one of her own composition, played by Little Miss Winifred Jones, who was attired in the style of the time of this great composer, in white satin knee breeches, black satin coat, powdered queue, and who was gracefully introduced with a few explanatory remarks by her mother, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones.

The meeting closed with the animated singing of America.

BENEFIT FOR MR. A. S. BURNS AT TEMPLE AUDITORIUM.

A number of members of the Glendale lodge of Odd Fellows attended the benefit for one of their brothers at Temple Auditorium in Los Angeles on Monday evening. Mr. A. S. Burns, the honored brother, had the misfortune some two or three years ago to lose his eyesight, but through his terrible affliction has never lost courage but put both feet forward and has done everything possible to care for his wife and family. The benefit was given under the auspices of the I. O. O. F., and was for the purpose of raising money with which to pay or help pay off a mortgage of one thousand dollars on his little home. The program was one of high class and interesting from beginning to the end. Mr. Burns stands well to the front in The Times contest for the capital prize, and during the evening subscriptions were solicited among the audience, and was most nobly responded to and ranged all the way from the little town of Watts to far-away Vancouver, B. C. One brother from that place taking a three years' subscription. The number of points gained was up in the hundreds of thousands. Mr. Burns, who is a man worthy of any support whatsoever, was present, and with a heart full of gratitude made a short speech in which he thanked each and every one for the kindness and brotherly love shown him not only on this special occasion, but all through his terrible affliction.

WEST GLENDALE.

West Glendale Parent-Teachers' Meeting.

The first meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association of the West Glendale school, was held as usual in the school building on Thursday afternoon, October 19th. The principal and teachers were delighted to see such a goodly number of mothers and friends present, which was between fifty and sixty. The sixth grade rendered a very fine selection, showing that the time spent on their musical instruction by Miss Foster, was in no wise wasted. Miss Foster delighted her audience with a piano solo characteristic of the Russians and was heartily encored. A musical number by four of the second grade pupils was exceptionally well rendered. Mrs. Mary Gridley, historian of the association, gave a short but very interesting talk. Mrs. Hellyer gave a delightful solo and responded to an encore. A short business session was held, after which refreshments were served. Twenty-eight new members were enrolled.

The picture that all the rooms are striving to keep was awarded this month to Miss Lorraine Mitchells room, that room having the largest percentage of mothers present. The members of the association are working faithfully and expect before long to fit up the office in a very comfortable way. They also expect to do a great deal in the way of emergency and hospital work.
